Typically producers are challenged to capture profit margins each year. Producers are dealing with a difference question in 2012. . . . How not to let windfall profit opportunities escape so producers can take new equity to the bank. 2012 grain prices offer producers profit opportunity. How do we manage the risk? How do we extend the personal profit cycle? How do we keep soaring like eagles in a flock of turkeys?

Additionally, a review of past weather patterns will be interfaced with how weather will impact the 2012 crop season. This knowledge helps producers manage the risk that the weather brings to crop production and marketing.

Join us for a synergetic presentation by two of the Midwest's leading agricultural speakers.....both Elwynn Taylor, giving his analysis of weather influence on the Midwest and David Kruse, providing his analysis of market risk and reward in 2012.
